RIYL: Meat Puppets, Oneida, Rush

When the shoe drops on the first bars of the new the USA is the Monster's full length, it becomes clear some changes have occurred since the last record, Sunset at the End of the Industrial Age. Buttery synth and elaborate vocal harmonies combine to levitate hairpieces at least a little bit. This is the perfect synthesis of their pastoral wanderings circa their second record, Wohaw and the punk spunk of the first and third full lengths.

The band is still a New York two-piece tribe of Native American obsessed truth salesmen, but after four full lengths and two EP's sounds confident. Their take on rock embraces proggy synth tones, elaborate harmonies and jaw dropping drum and guitar that is no accident, and can be seen in ragged glory when they come to your local rock hole.

So now you know the truth, and your course of action is quite sure. Trim the fat in your life and eliminate lesser musics and embrace the glorious pelt of this new record. The band will be touring, as bands do when records come out. Be a witness, go to the show and participate in a band at the top of their game. Barring that, turn this on, turn this up and erase false reality.

COPY AND PASTE

- Their fourth record for Load, and is touring the US in October, check loadrecords.com for d-tails
- the band self recorded this record and the sound on this is at once face meltingly proggy and soul erasingly cosmic. Blends the USA is a Monster universe into a coherent stone tablet of rock with the cool lozenge of operatic populism.
- Load SmartPromo technology will place the record in the minds of the liberal media
- Stunning Native American artwork manufactured on German made printing presses in Canada and pressed in California and Tennessee
